KISSING.

"Oh, quit, get out-now don't you-I really wish you wouldn't! Oh, quit-will you!-get out! You know you ought to shouldn't.

"There, now, you've got it—oh, be still!
You shan't have any more;
You've got—oh, take away your face!— What no man got before.

"Once more !-there-that'll do-don't. You've rumpled up my hair; I'you'll but quit, I'll give you one— Now take it-there-there-there!"

DRINKING, DRUGGING AND GAMBLING .-The following, from the New York Express, may apply, to other localities:

Drinking, Drugging and Gambling, we have reason to believe, are carried on to a more frightful extent in this city than is generally supposed. Some cases have come under our notice of which we believe the police are cognizant, which ought to make young men who are easily led into temptation tremble for their own safety, and compel fathers and mothers to know a great deal more than they do of the places in which their sons pass their nights, and how they occupy their time. A set of harpies are always ready to allure this class into the gambling hells of the city, and when there to turn them over to the tender mercies of those who are skillful in the use of cards and tice. Once in these dens, fitted up as they are, with all the glare and glitter of attractive ort, with counters and tables spread with thice wines and viands, the temptation is doubtly great, to sacrifice all that one has, and all that he can command. Young men who have a spark of love for home, friends, parental kindness, should shun all such seductions as they would a pestilence.
